Nevada Association for Applied Behavior Analysis Names CARD's Director of Research as New President

Dr. Jonathan Tarbox says this is an open door for change and hopes this opportunity will pave the way for more interest in behavior analytic work.

Reno, Nevada – Jonathan Tarbox, PhD, BCBA, Director of Research and Development at the Center for Autism and Related Disorders, Inc. (CARD) was named president-elect of the Nevada Association of Behavior Analysis.

"As the new President-Elect of the Nevada Association for Behavior Analysis, I am very pleased to have the opportunity to serve the field of behavior analysis and to work toward advancing the interests of the field, as well as the interests of those who benefit from behavior analytic work in the state of Nevada," says Dr. Tarbox.

"It's an exciting time right now for the state of Nevada because there is a lot of positive change happening but there is still a lot of work to be done. We are particularly interested in pursuing activities that will expand access to behavioral services to a larger proportion of Nevadans who need them, while at the same time protecting and fostering the growth of the scientific foundation of the field."

Dr. Tarbox received his PhD in Psychology from the University of Nevada, Reno. He began his services with CARD in December 2004. Dr. Tarbox has presented at numerous national and international conferences, and has written in multiple medical publications.

The Nevada Association for Behavior Analysis' continuous mission is to promote intellectual exchange and professional development in the field of behavior analysis.
